What people with aphasia want you to know!

My brain is good, but my mouth isn't.

Aphasia is a loss of language, not intellect.

I've only lost one ability, I'm still me.

Aphasia is an invisible disability.

Aphasia
the loss of ability to understand or express speech, caused by brain damage.

What's going on isn't obvious. It's happening inside.

Words are there, but they can't come out.

Even though I'm quiet, I still have a lot to say.

I have problems with speech output.

For more information, contact Wendell Johnson Speech and Hearing Clinic, (319) 335-8736.