The demands on earth’s resources have never been greater, leading to a wide array of environmental impacts on a grand scale. This course profiles the leading global environmental issues of our time, particularly those associated with land use, human population change, pollution, energy, and climate change. We adopt an interdisciplinary perspective that emphasizes their causes, consequences, and solutions.