The Visiting Scholar Program offers undergraduates the opportunity to spend time with some of America’s most distinguished scholars. The purpose of the program is to contribute to the intellectual life of the institution by making possible an exchange of ideas between the Visiting Scholar and the resident faculty and students.

During the 2016-2017 academic year, the Visiting Scholars will travel to over 100 colleges and universities with chapters of Phi Beta Kappa, spending two days at each one and taking full part in the academic life of the institution. During the two-day visit, the Scholar will give a general lecture, free and open to the public, take part in class and seminar discussions, and meet informally with students and faculty.

The Visiting Scholars are invited to make visits in response to requests from the Phi Beta Kappa chapters. All arrangements are handled by the Washington office, and the Scholars’ itineraries will be worked out in accordance with requests received by April 15, 2016.

A service fee of $500, to be paid by the sponsoring chapter, the interested departments, the sheltering institution, or by all jointly, will be billed against the chapter at the beginning of the semester in which the visit takes place. The sponsoring groups will also be responsible for the costs of housing, meals, and local transportation while the Scholar is their guest.

For more information go to pbk.org.

ROLENA ADONOIO, Sterling Professor of Spanish, Yale University
WILLIAM BALDUS, John Archibald Wheeler/Battelle Professor in Physics, Princeton University
BART D. EHMAN, James A. Gray Distinguished Professor of Religious Studies, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill
BARBARA J. GROSZ, Higgins Professor of Natural Sciences, Harvard University
PHILIP KITCHER, John Dewey Professor of Philosophy, Columbia University
MARSHA I. LESTER, Edmund J. Kahn Distinguished Professor in Chemistry, University of Pennsylvania
NORA NARANJO MORSE, Sculptor, Poet, Espanola, New Mexico
DANIEL T. RODGERS, Henry Charles Lea Professor of History, Emeritus, Princeton University
JEREMY A. SABLOFF, Christopher H. Browne Distinguished Professor of Anthropology, Emeritus, University of Pennsylvania
DAVID F. WEIMAN, Alena Wels Hirschorn ’58 Professor of Economics, Barnard College
LAURA WEXLER, Professor of American Studies and Professor of Women’s, Gender, and Sexuality Studies, Yale University
JOHN FABIAN WITT, Allen H. Duffy Class of 1960 Professor of Law, Yale University
PATRICIA WRIGHT, Distinguished Service Professor of Anthropology, Stony Brook University
SHUHAI XIAO, Professor of Geobiology, Virginia Tech

Founded in 1776, the Phi Beta Kappa Society is the nation’s oldest and most recognized academic honor society. Its mission is to champion education in the liberal arts and sciences, to recognize academic excellence, and to foster freedom of thought and expression.

The Phi Beta Kappa Society
VISITING SCHOLARS PROGRAM
GENERAL INFORMATION

The Visiting Scholar Program allows undergraduate students to spend time with some of America’s most distinguished scholars. The purpose of the program is to contribute to the intellectual life of the institution by making possible an exchange of ideas between the visiting scholar and the resident faculty and students.

During the 2016-2017 academic year, the visiting scholars will travel to over 100 colleges and universities with chapters of Phi Beta Kappa, spending two days at each one and taking full part in the academic life of the institution. During the two-day visit, the scholar will give a general lecture, free and open to the public, take part in class and seminar discussions, and meet informally with students and faculty.

The visiting scholars are invited to make visits in response to requests from the Phi Beta Kappa chapters. All arrangements are handled by the Washington office, and the scholar’s itinerary will be worked out in accordance with requests received by April 15, 2016.

A service fee of $500, to be paid by the sponsoring chapter, the interested departments, the sheltering institution, or by all jointly, will be billed against the chapter at the beginning of the semester in which the visit takes place. The sponsoring groups will also be responsible for the costs of housing, meals, and local transportation while the scholar is their guest.

For more information, go to pbk.org.
BARBARA GROSZ
Higgins Professor of Natural Sciences in the Department of Computer Science and the John P.秋天教授 of Education in the Faculty of Arts and Sciences, the Association for the Advancement of Artificial Intelligence, a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and an honorary professor at the University College London. She has served as a member of the National Academy of Sciences, a fellow of the American Philosophical Association, and recipient of the 2013 France Prime Minister for Women and the Sciences. Her installation exhibits and large-scale public art speak to environmental, cultural, and social practice issues. An artist best known for her work with clay and organic materials, she has received commissions in the United States, Europe, and South America. Among her publications is a recent book, ShapeFishing, Foraging for Ideas: Art, Science, and Engineering in the 21st Century, which was recently recognized by the American Philosophical Association Pacific Division and the American Association for the Advancement of Science. She has been honored by Columbia with its Lenfest Distinguished Faculty Professorship in 2003-2004.

JENNIFER HOKUSHI
Marvin Professor
The current President of the American Political Science Association, Jennifer Hochschild is Professor of Government, Professor of African and American African Studies at Harvard, she has taught and created courses on the histories of American politics and political philosophy, precisely to the uses of race in politics, ideas of political freedom, and the uses of political liberty as political ideas for the social and economic conditions of women in science. A member of the National Academy of Regional Sciences, she is a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and the American Association for the Sociological Research, the Society for Political Philosophy, the American Political Science Association, and the American Political Science Association. She has written over 13 books, including five on African American politics and political philosophy, particularly in the areas of race, gender, and identity. Her most recent book, "We Think They Are We Know About Them: Why We Suff er More Than We Think They Are Who We Are," has been recognized by the American Political Science Association as the best book in the field of American politics for 2016. It was also a finalist for the National Book Award in nonfiction. The book has been translated into five languages, including French, German, Japanese, and Spanish and has been widely reviewed in the United States, Europe, and Latin America. It was also chosen as the 2017 Library of Congress Book of the Year and has been a New York Times bestseller. It has been translated into 11 languages and has sold over 1 million copies in the United States alone. The book has been widely reviewed in the United States, Europe, and Latin America. It has been a New York Times bestseller and has been translated into 11 languages. It has been translated into Spanish, German, Japanese, and Chinese, and has been widely reviewed in the United States, Europe, and Latin America. It has been translated into Spanish, German, and Japanese, and has been widely reviewed in the United States, Europe, and Latin America. It has been translated into Spanish, German, and Japanese, and has been widely reviewed in the United States, Europe, and Latin America. It has been translated into Spanish, German, and Japanese, and has been widely reviewed in the United States, Europe, and Latin America.