Professor: Brian Ekdale, brian-ekdale@uiowa.edu, E324 AJB
Office Hours: Drop-in hours are Wednesday from 12–3 p.m. You can also make an appointment.

Course Overview: In this graduate seminar, students will explore theoretical and methodological perspectives and techniques that allow us to study, interpret, and criticize media. We will examine how media intersect with political, economic, and social shifts through analyzing scholarly works in our field. The goal of the class is to provide students with an understanding of how to pose original, provocative, and clear research questions that lead to rigorous and useful media research.

This course also serves as an introduction to research and graduate study in journalism and mass Communication. It is an entry point for the M.A. thesis and Ph.D. students’ degree work. More broadly, the course will provide an overview of various approaches to the study of the media, introducing students to the range of theoretical and methodological currents in our discipline as well as to the culture of academia.

Course Objectives:
- Help students understand connections between ideas covered in class, graduate coursework, and careers
- Develop a set of common experiences for a diverse group of incoming students
- Introduce students to scholarly journals, organizations, opportunities to participate professionally, norms, habits, and ethics of the profession
- Discuss theorists, theories, and major ideas in the field as well as their interrelationships
- Become colleagues and get to know faculty in the department
- Prepare students to conduct original research
- Understand the conventions and techniques of scholarly writing
- Prepare students for success in graduate school and an academic career

Readings and Required Texts: This course has three required books. Books can be purchased through online sellers and are available in the SJMC Resource Center on reserve. The other required articles and chapters are available on ICON. Readings are to be completed by the start of class in the week indicated.

- Our third required book is TBD. We will discuss options and make a final selection during the first weeks of the semester.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS

Participation (20%): The success of any seminar depends on the participation of its students. Therefore, you will be graded on your attendance, preparedness, contribution, and cooperation.

- Attendance means showing up. Simply put, you should be in seminar. If you have a legitimate reason for arriving late, leaving early, or missing class, please discuss this with me before the start of class.
- Preparedness means completing all assigned readings prior to the start of class. While I encourage you to draw from your individual experiences and areas of expertise, our discussions should be centered on the ideas explored in the weekly readings.
- Contribution means sharing your ideas. Each of you offers a unique perspective based on your beliefs, upbringing, and areas of expertise. Therefore, it is important that you share your thoughts, opinions, and reactions with each other.
- Cooperation means working well with others. A seminar should be a place where everyone feels comfortable sharing their views, even if those views are uncommon or unpopular. At the same time, you must always be aware of how your words and actions affect those around you. Intolerance, antagonism, and demagoguery have no place in the healthy exchange of ideas.

Reading Response Points (15%): To help spark in-class discussion, each week you will write a few notes about the weekly readings. In your response, I want you to write 2-3 “bullet points” for each assigned reading. These bullet points could be any combination of the following:

- What you see as the main contribution(s) of the reading
- Which parts of the reading that resonated with you most (i.e., the argument was most provocative, the evidence was most persuasive, the writing was most compelling, etc.)
- Which parts of the reading that resonated with you most least (i.e., the argument was least provocative, the evidence was least persuasive, the writing was least compelling, etc.)
- Questions you still have about the topic after completing the reading

These briefs should demonstrate that you have attempted to understand the readings, you’ve grappled with their arguments, and you are able to clearly communicate your ideas. I am less interested in the quality of your prose than the thoughtfulness of your response. Upload your response briefs to ICON at least an hour before the start of class. These briefs will be graded as Satisfactory/Unsatisfactory as follows:

- Satisfactory: Clear evidence of good faith attempt to understand the readings’ contributions; original thoughts; completeness
- Unsatisfactory: Little evidence of good faith attempt to understand the readings’ contributions; unoriginal thoughts; partial or incomplete

Scholarly Vision Paper (5%): In a 2-page paper, you will write about the questions, concepts, and/or theories that motivated you to seek a graduate degree in journalism and mass communication. What questions do you most want to answer, and why? What methods do you imagine you will use? What populations (of people or of media texts) do you most want to engage? What applications do you see to the fields of journalism, media, and/or strategic communication? We will revisit these papers at the end of the semester, to see how your vision has changed or become more concrete or contextualized based on the readings done throughout the semester.
Research Project (60%): For the final project in this class, you will develop and write an original research paper grounded in theory. Various parts of the project are due throughout the semester so you can receive feedback from me and your colleagues as you develop your research paper. Specific instructions for each portion of the Research Project will be provided later in the semester.

- Research questions (1 page) – 5% (due week 9)
- Bibliography and outline (2-4 pages) – 5% (due week 10)
- Final paper proposal (5-7 pages) – 10% (due week 12)
- Proposal peer review (1-2 pages) – 5% (due week 13)
- Paper presentation (12 minutes) – 10% (due week 15)
- Research paper – 25% (due finals week)

Absences and Attendance
Students are responsible for attending class and for contributing to the learning environment of a course. Students are also responsible for knowing their course absence policies, which will vary by instructor. All absence policies, however, must uphold the UI policy related to student illness, mandatory religious obligations, including Holy Day obligations, unavoidable circumstances, or University authorized activities (https://clas.uiowa.edu/students/handbook/attendance-absences). Students may use this

Academic Integrity
All undergraduates enrolled in courses offered by CLAS have, in essence, agreed to the College’s Code of Academic Honesty. Misconduct is reported to the College, resulting in suspension or other sanctions, with sanctions communicated with the student through the UI email address (https://clas.uiowa.edu/students/handbook/academic-fraud-honor-code).

Accommodations for Disabilities
UI is committed to an educational experience that is accessible to all students. A student may request academic accommodations for a disability (such as mental health, attention, learning, vision, and physical or health-related condition) by registering with Student Disability Services (SDS). The student is then responsible for discussing specific accommodations with the instructor. More information is at https://sds.studentlife.uiowa.edu/.

Administrative Home of the Course
The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences (CLAS) is the administrative home of this course and governs its add/drop deadlines, the second-grade-only option, and related policies. Other colleges may have different policies. CLAS policies may be found here: https://clas.uiowa.edu/students/handbook.

Communication and the Required Use of UI Email
Students are responsible for official correspondences sent to the UI email address (uiowa.edu) and must use this address for all communication within UI (Operations Manual, III.15.2).

Complaints
Students with a complaint about an academic issue should first visit with the instructor or course supervisor and then with the Chair of the department or program offering the course; students may next bring the issue to the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. For more information, see https://clas.uiowa.edu/students/handbook/student-rights-responsibilities.

Final Examination Policies
The final exam schedule is announced around the fifth week of classes; students are responsible for knowing the date, time, and place of a final exam. Students should not make travel plans until knowing this information. No exams of any kind are allowed the week before finals. Visit https://registrar.uiowa.edu/final-examination-scheduling-policies.

Nondiscrimination in the Classroom
UI is committed to making the classroom a respectful and inclusive space for all people irrespective of their gender, sexual, racial, religious or other identities. Toward this goal, students are invited to optionally share their preferred names and pronouns with their instructors and classmates. The University of Iowa prohibits discrimination and harassment against individuals on the basis of race, class, gender, sexual orientation, national origin, and other identity categories set forth in the University’s Human Rights policy. For more information, contact the Office of Equal Opportunity and Diversity (diversity.uiowa.edu).

Sexual Harassment
Sexual harassment subverts the mission of the University and threatens the well-being of students, faculty, and staff. All members of the UI community must uphold the UI mission and contribute to a safe environment that enhances learning. Incidents of sexual harassment must be reported immediately. For assistance, please see https://osmrc.uiowa.edu/.
